

Dear Members of the FCC,
I have only been a subscriber to XM Radio for about six months. I decided to subscribe to XM after becoming completely frustrated with local radio and commercial after commercial after commercial. Between local car dealers, furniture stores and injury lawyers taking up all the airtime, it had become a major chore to find any music playing on any of the eighteen or so stations in my listening area. The ten dollars I spend on XM radio a month is the best monthly money I've ever spent. As yet, local traffic and weather are not available in my region, Rochester, NY, but that does not alter my concerns about groups like the NAB trying to restrict XM Radio's right to provide national subscribers with local information. Local television and radio stations in my community are primarily owned and operated by national companies such as Clear Channel and others. Is that a concern of the NAB as well?
I also subscribe to Dishnet Satellite TV that recently started offering local TV channels in the Rochester area. I have been able to receive local weather forecasts through Dishnet for some time now. Is this too a concern of the NAB?
I often use my computer and the internet to look up local weather reports and traffic conditions. Does the NAB protest this?
This is to let you know that I am very much opposed to HR 4026, and strongly urge you to reject the NAB petition 04-160.
Thank you.

Randall Callin